PWA Submissions Halted; Natatorium Already in

3 1/2 Billions Now on File Requiring Funds, Says Ickes

Hope Natatorium Submitted to Washington Week of January 20

A $35,600 PROJECT

68-Page Local Application Formally Submitted Last Month

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator (PWA), Saturday halted the submission of new non-federal projects and instructed public works state engineers to inform prospective applicants for funds that further requests could not be considered.

A survey of the applications now on hand in the capital and the state public works office revealed a total of more than 3 1/2 billion dollars' worth of projects for which no allotments have been made and for which no money is immediately available because of the exhaustion of the original 3 billion 500 million public works fund.

Natatorium Filled

The Hope natatorium project was filed with the Public Works Administration the week ending January 20, according to a letter written to E. F. McFadden, attorney for the Hope Natatorium corporation, January 24 by William B. Ickes, PWA administrator.

It was reported that Little Rock and Hope were the first cities in Arkansas to obtain approval of the State Advisory Board for building natatoriums, prior to submission to the PWA at Washington.

From Saturday's Associated Press dispatch it appears that a line is drawn between federal and non-federal projects under the PWA, with the possibility of additional congressional appropriations being required.

The Hope natatorium is a non-federal project, self-liquidating, with the revenue from paid admissions guaranteeing repayment of the government loan.

$35,600 Project

The total cost of the project will be $35,600, of which $7,800 is to be a direct federal grant, with a loan of $27,800 to be repaid out of revenues.

It would give work to an average of 27 men 20 hours a week for 13 weeks.

The natatorium provides a wading pool, a shallow pool for swimming, and a deep pool for swimming and diving. There is to be a complete purification system, with circulating chlorine and a pre-ure filter which keeps the water up to 15.5 standards for sanitary drinking.

The other 14 applications, complying with government regulations and specifications, require a total volume of 68 pages, the last copy of which is held by Mr. McFadden, the corporation attorney.

The natatorium corporation, a non-profit group organized by the civic clubs and city council, is headed by Ralph Benton.

Best Cotton Price Since Fall 1930

Bankhead Compulsory Cut Bill Credited With Price Rise

Unreported country farmers could sell their cotton for 12 1/2 a pound cash on the Chicago exchange at the first time since the fall of 1930. The increase in the price of cotton will bring the price of local buyers told Hope Star.

May futures delivery contracts, closed on the 26 Chicago exchange at 12 1/2, and a 12 1/2 on the New York exchange.

There was an additional gain of twelve points on the Chicago cotton exchange, which is a promise of possible high price in 1931. This exchange is open for business on Saturday, then it will be the New Orleans or the New York exchange. When these markets closed, many contracts were changed. Many in Chicago at 12 1/2, 13 1/2, gradually increased to a close at 12 1/2.

This marked the first day of successive gains by cotton when liquidation and a lower price were looked for in the cotton trade Saturday, due to a report that a long hedge, and a city exchange closed Monday for the birthday.

This report means a cotton price is expected to be on the Bankhead bill, introduced in the senate this week, which will place a tax on all American cotton grown above

WAISAW, Poland.—(AP)—A strong wind spun a windmill too fast in the village of Kostary, province of Polesie, Saturday.

The windmill burst into flames from excessive friction.

The flames were carried by the gale into the village.

Fifty-four buildings burned down.

Aged Negro Found Dead on Railroad

Unidentified Man Apparently Sustained No Accident, Probe Reveals

An unidentified negro, aged about 60, was found dead late Friday on the right-of-way of the Missouri Pacific railroad, 10 miles west of here.

His tracks led from the railroad to a fence about 100 feet away, where he was found. Dr. P. B. Carrigan, railroad physician, said that the negro had not met death by accident, dying from some unknown cause. No marks of violence could be found on the body.

Several negroes viewed the body at Hope Furniture company undertaking parlors Saturday in an attempt at identification.

Farmer Loses on His Hoarded Gold

Late Presenting $525 in Metal, He Suffers Depreciation Loss

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Hoarding of $525 in gold coins has resulted in a financial loss for a Pope county farmer.

The farmer recently presented the coins for deposit in a bank here, but the money could not be accepted under the new federal monetary regulations.

The farmer, after having admitted he buried the gold, got a receipt for the coin, which will be forwarded to the Federal Reserve bank where it will be redeemed at face value less abrasion.

Cashier Lloyd Reed said the gold will show a loss of a fraction of an ounce due to wear, and that the farmer probably will lose six or seven dollars of his $525.

Communist Bands Suppressed After Night of Terror

Riot-Ridden Streets of Paris Are Cleared at Dawn Saturday

DIRECTORATE OF 4

Doumergue Names Emergency Group to Handle Austro-German Threat

PARIS, France.—(AP)—Communist bands which had created a night of terror were cleared from miles of riot-ridden streets just before dawn Saturday.

Unconfirmed reports told of several fatalities.

Shots were freely exchanged and there was hand-to-hand fighting and pitched battles along the burned barricades.

Thousands of police participated in the drive against the rioters who were routed from the Place de la Republique.

Saturday Premier Doumergue and 20 seasoned statesmen, hand-picked for his "salvation ministry," concentrated on plans to end the disorders.

One of their first acts, however, was directed at foreign relations. They set up a directorship of four men, headed by the premier, to handle foreign affairs swiftly and vigorously, and to strike hard against the possibility of a German union with Austria.

Fresh Outbreak

PARIS, France.—Gunfire spurted anew Friday night in the working quarter of Paris where Communists battled police, set fire to two churches and besieged public buildings.

A policeman was gravely injured. Twenty-two others were seriously hurt and nearly 1,000 less seriously, some of them struck by bullets. Eight hundred were arrested as bands of shooting men ran through the district, smashing windows and looting stores.

The working class district near the Place de la Republique—a mile square in area—was thrown into an uproar.

The churches of St. Joseph and St. Ambrose were set afire. The big and new East railroad station was sacked and the North station was besieged. The neighborhood of the city hall was beleaguered.

Stone pavements were torn up to build barricades and for ammunition.

The fierce fighting began with a Communist attempt to march on the Place de la Republique for a demonstration of break "Fascism."

Cabinet Formed

Just a few hours earlier Premier Gaston Doumergue had formed a cabinet and called upon the populace to renounce agitation and place "the interest of France and the republic above all else."

Seven persons were hurt in the first clash. While officers' ranks were being reinforced the crowd also gained new members, until it was estimated to number 10,000, and surged through the Belleville and Montmartre sections.

At least 1,500 manifestants started marching toward the Place de la Republique along the Boulevard du Temple where police up to that point had managed to keep the crowd scattered.

Communists surged into the workers' neighborhoods along the east side of Paris. They chanted the Internationale as they ran and fought.

Police said the Communists opened fire when officers tried to disperse them.

Pistol shots greeted every squad of police reinforcements, and many police fell under the hail of bullets or were set upon and furiously kicked.

Many foreigners were arrested, but it was believed none were American.

The police stopped mass movements of the rioters by erecting barricades.

Prefect Sibour said that police, although worn out by the week's disorders which already had cost 15 lives, were "still without pity" toward "hoodlums whose depredations curse such demonstrations."

Thousands of police massed upon the disturbed area in the northeast section of the city and used their guns freely.

Doumergue brought together a group of political enemies pledged to restore order.

Five more pages of uncensored and sensational war pictures, vividly explained by Floyd Gibbons, famous war correspondent, will be published in next Sunday's Chicago Herald and Examiner. Be sure to watch for them every Sunday!

French Revolt, Music to Exiled Pretender

From his Belgian retreat, the Duc de Guise (inset) dreams of another coronation in a royal court of France, such as that depicted in the old sketch which you see here.

Duc de Guise Biding Time for Monarchy

13 Noble Families Would Profit If He Returned to French Throne as King John the Third

At the height of civil turmoil in France, a bearded pretender puts pen to paper . . . "Frenchmen! This is the hour for you to rally to monarchical principles! . . . and thus makes his bid for the throne . . . in the following article, the excited but hopeful Duc de Guise and his fellow Royalists are described by Morris Gilbert of NEA Service's Paris staff.

BY MORRIS GILBERT
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, France.—There are thirteen families in this country which, according to common repute, would stand to profit by the return to the throne of France of the Bourbon Duc de Guise as King John III.

These families consist of those holding the noble title of Duke and Peer of the Realm. Their titles are inviolate. No monarchist can dispute them, for they constitute the old peerage, the real McCoy of French nobility.

To be punctilious, these Dukedoms and Peers again, according to general understanding, consist of: d'Uzes, de Grammont, de Luyne, de La Rochefoucauld, de Richelieu, de Rohan, de Noailles, de Brissac, de Fitz James, d'Harcourt, de Preslin, and de Clermont-Tonnerre.

Until the death of the last surviving male heir a few months ago in a British country-house fire, there was a fourteenth family, actually a first family, since the title was Premier in France; the family of de Tremoille. With the loss of the young duke, the line was wiped out.

Besides these thirteen pristine families, there are quantities of other titles. Dukes, Viscounts, Counts, Barons, Marquises. But the return of the Bourbons would cast one hour, a decided shade on many of these. At present, with no noble protocol

Leon Daudet, one of the Duc de Guise's followers, is shown in the photograph. He is a member of the Duc de Guise's family.

Aircraft Shares Absorb Contract Stoppage by U. S.

Senate Sits as Court in Air Mail Contract Scandal Probe

CANCEL CONTRACTS

34 Routes, Including Local One, Lose Out—Army to Fly Mail

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Shares recovered more than half their loss after a sharp decline in initial transactions in the stock market Saturday and 13-cent cotton was chalked up for the first time since August, 1930.

Commodities acted generally better than securities. Wheat, after losing a cent a bushel, improved later, and cotton closed up 50 cents a bale or more. January deliveries touch 13 cents. March closed at 12.32.

Aircraft shares broke sharply at the opening, reflecting the cancellation of government mail contracts Friday. But the air issues recovered part of their losses.

MacCracken on Trial

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Sitting as a court for one of the few times in its history, the United States senate Saturday approached a verdict in the contempt trial of three aviation company officials, while it awaited the arrest of William P. MacCracken, former assistant secretary of commerce for air, who refused to appear before the senate Friday.

Facing the senators, Frederick P. Lee, MacCracken's law partner, told of a visit to his office by L. H. Britton, vice-president of Northwest Airways, to see the mail files then in possession of MacCracken.

Britton is one of those on trial for removal of the air mail records which had been subpoenaed by the senate investigating committee.

The others are: Harris M. Hanshue, president, and Gilbert Givvin, Washington representative, of Western Air Express.

Britton, Lee said, turned over the files hastily and was not in the office more than 10 minutes.

When through, the witness added, Britton said:

"Mr. Lee, these are purely personal letters."

Lee said he inspected the letters to make sure they were not addressed to postoffice department officials.

Hits 12 Companies

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government late Friday took the business of flying mail from all the 12 companies with which it held domestic contracts and ordered the agency which first flew it, the army, to again take up the work.

The blanket abrogation of contracts, effective February 19, followed presentation to President Roosevelt of evidence gathered by a senate committee in a long drawn study of the circumstances surrounding the letting of the contracts during previous Republican administrations.

Mr. Roosevelt instructed Postmaster General Farley to end the contracts and immediately issued an executive order placing the army Air Service at the disposition of the Postoffice Department. He also arranged with Secretary Roper to make available to the army mail ships all landing fields under the regulation of the Commerce Department.

Fraud Basis for Action

The president made the disclosure of the cancellation at his regular press conference, indicating the basis of the action was the evidence of fraud and collusion produced by the senate inquiry and by a parallel inquiry by the Postoffice Department.

The cancellation order, issued by Farley, did not include the Pan-American Airways which carries mail to Caribbean islands, and to South

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

President Is Swell, Thinks Jack Danksy . . . Guess What Kansas Is, and Then Gasp . . . "Patriots" Fight Child Labor Cause.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Scores of government workers do nothing but answer hundreds of thousands of letters addressed to President Roosevelt. They're scattered through federal agencies, to which the White House refers mail in bales.

When 12-year-old Jack Danksy of Denver wrote to "Dear Beloved President of all the American People," his letter was shunted to Public Works.

This was a boy who had been ill six years, had had three operations and needed another, and had been taken to Denver by his mother because his illness required it.

His father had to stay in Pittsburgh with a $22 a week job, which was what made Jack miserable. Couldn't Mr. Roosevelt help him get a job in Denver?

The White House rubber-stamped the letter: "Respectfully referred for acknowledgement and consideration."

Jack was answered in the name of Executive Officer Philip B. Fleming, who suggested consultation with the Colorado federal re-employment director. The boy's next letter said he had been told his father must have lived in Colorado a year, to be helped.

Wouldn't Fleming visit personally to Director Craig Vincent, in which case Jack promised to "get entirely well."

"Please read this correspondence carefully and give me a report on the possibility of finding a place for this boy's father," Fleming wrote.

Meanwhile, the elder Danksy had gone to Denver for a promised job, which lasted only a week, because the boss folded up and left town.

The correspondence file closes with a joyous note from Jack Danksy which says his "daddy" has a CWA job which will do nicely and keep him from a forced return to Pittsburgh until something better appears.

Jack thinks Roosevelt and Fleming are just swell.

Take This, Mr. Webster

Kansas May have been a lot of things, but it remained for Congressman Ulysses Samuel Guyer to describe it as "a virgin parallelogram of unfettered civilization," astounding House philologists.

In a speech eulogizing the late Senator John G. Ingalls, one of the last post-Civil War "bloody shirt" wavers, Guyer said that was what Kansas was when she was "knocking at the gates of the Union for admission to the Sisterhood of States."

"Patriot" in New Crusade

Professional patriots, though still reeling from the Soviet recognition blow, are rallying gamely to the cause of child labor.

The child labor amendment has been ratified in 20 states. President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary Perkins, Postmaster General Farley, and other administration leaders are on record for ratification.

But the newly formed "National Committee for Protection of the Child, Family, School, and Church" is lobbying vigorously against it in state legislatures.

The lobby licked ratification by one vote in the Missouri Senate and now is busy in Kentucky and Mississippi. Its propaganda says the amendment is bolshevistic.

Hull Had Bright Idea

The secret of Secretary Hull's astonishing popularity at the Latin-American congress came back with the delegation as it returned from Montevideo.

On his first day in Uruguay, Hull set out to make personal calls on heads of the 20 other delegations. No secretary of state ever thought of that before.

Some Hispano-American diplomats were in their baths and others still in bed when they received the surprise announcement: "The secretary of state of the United States."

But they were all so tickled that Hull became the darling of the conference.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Are Valentines Silly?

"Don't you think valentines are foolish?" asked the caller. "Isn't it just one more way to teach children to waste money?"

"How did you feel about it when you were little?"

"Her face changed." "I guess I liked Valentine Day better than anything else but Christmas," she acknowledged. "I can remember poking around stores for days."

"But times are so different now," she urged. "Children have movies and dozens of toys we never had. Besides, money is so tight. I feel as though every cent we spent on foolish things should be going into shoes for some poor child."

Fantasy for the Child

"Would it go into shoes?"

"Well—perhaps not. I do give all I can to the Welfare, and really I've just about stripped the family to pass clothing on where it is so terribly needed. But I suppose you're right. We use conscience a lot when we're thinking things out and then forget when it comes to putting theory into practice. So you think it's all right to let children send valentines?"

"Why not? It's a sort of a gay interlude. Children crave the unusual; they get hungry for the excitement that colors routine. Don't you think they do awfully well to go to school every day and get their lessons, and stand a lot of bossing from everybody all the time?"

"Do you know," she exclaimed, "I often wonder how they do it. These dark days they come home and half the time they can't get out to play. They're tired of their Christmas things now and I nearly go crazy. But yet I do feel sorry for them."

"With the magazines what they are now, they could make beautiful valentines with cut-outs," I suggested. "Pictures can be mounted on cardboard and embellished according to fancy with all the frills they can get on. I know they'd rather go and buy their magic, but it's just an idea if pennies are scarce. Glue and tissue paper and a few suggestions from you would keep them busy for days. Did you ever show your Daisy how to make paper-flowers? It's the best sport I know for a rainy day."

Making Paper Flowers

"Me?" Paper flowers? Good gracious no. How do you do it?"

"Get a spool of soft wire, plain paper of all colors and much green to wind on the stems. Take a strip and cut scallops on one edge, scrape each 'petal' or scallop with scissors and watch it curl. Then roll it as you would a bandage, not too tight, and gather in the plain end. You've got a rose. Twist the wire about the nub, leaving a stretch for the stem, wrap this in green and there you are. As for the rest, use your imagination. Melt some paraffin and dip your posy in, then let it dry. You will be surprised."

"Oh, dear. Don't tell me any more. I can't wait to get home. Valentines and paper flowers. And—Say, what do you do with the flowers?" she asked suspiciously. "I don't want them all over the place."

"Yes," I answered solemnly. "You'll do it and like it. The best Christmas bouquet I ever had was one of the most awful creations you ever saw. I put away an artistic centerpiece I bought for the occasion and put my surprise in the place of honor."

She gave an amused little shrug and departed.

that the way you dress your hair and how you apply cosmetics are all important.

Oriental make-up requires a grease paint foundation, theatrical fashion. You can get a small stick of No. 5 grease paint (it's a neutral shade) and another stick of yellow grease paint in any cosmetic store.

Wring a clean towel tightly around your head, making sure that the hair-line is completely covered.

Clean your face and neck with cleansing cream and wipe off only the surplus. Then smooth on a light coat of No. 5, blending it in with upward and outward strokes until there are no streaks. Much of the success in using grease paint foundations for fancy dress parties lies in leaving on just the right amount of cleansing cream. So you may have to experiment a couple of times before the grease paint goes on smoothly.

Put a small amount (one dot on each cheek and one on your forehead) of yellow grease paint over the foundation and work it into your skin. Begin at the base of your throat if your costume has a low neckline, or just under your chin if it has a high one.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married on the same day as LILA "HOTLANT" and HERBIE BISH but Lila's wedding is a society event while Gypsy's is very simple.

While Lila lives in luxury Gypsy has to struggle to keep expenses within Tom's income. She keeps her job teaching and she learns she is to have a baby. After David's birth she is extremely busy, caring for him and for her home.

Lila is frequently away in the evening and Gypsy suspects he is interested in VERA GRAY. One day she sees them going to lunch together. She is heartbroken and refuses to listen to his explanations.

Lila confesses to Gypsy that she intends to divorce Derek and marry MACK O BROUGHTON, richer and older.

Gypsy's father is seriously injured in a motor accident and she and Tom rush to the hospital. Meanwhile Lila tells Derek she wants a divorce.

Now go on with the story

CHAPTER XXXIII

AFTER endless ages it was morning in the shabby house on Upper Dean street. The light in the sick room had been extinguished. The starved night nurse had rustled to the door and conferred with the day nurse, a small, competent Scot with reddish hair. Gypsy, staggering with fatigue, had caught the words, "question of hours . . ."

and again felt that wild, sick plunging of the heart.

Harvey Morell, the center of all this concern, lay white, silent, voiceless on the big bed. The covers were drawn taut. The rigid neatness of hospital routine prevailed, lending an air of terrible strangeness to the wide, shabby room with the curtained bay windows. There was a white scarf on the familiar cherry table with a glass, a spoon and a covered carafe. There was a clinical thermometer on the stripped dresser beside the nurse's watch and the patient's chart. Everything was efficient, quiet, orderly, striking terror to the heart of the slim girl with the tumbled dark curls.

Mrs. Morell had at last been persuaded to lie down and rest, but Gypsy still sat, one foot curled under her, schoolgirl fashion, on the window seat. The handkerchief that she pressed to her eyes now and then was soppy. She had promised to be as quiet as a mouse and she had kept that promise. But every now and again her eyes would fill and she would press that damp, folded handkerchief to them mechanically.

About the clock the specialist from the city came, a gray, tall man with piercing eyes. Gypsy had waited in the hall with her mother as he conferred with Dr. Bannerman. She knew now how a prisoner must feel as he waits the jury's verdict. It was terrible—this waiting. Her mother sat in a low chair, twisting and untwisting her handkerchief, never lifting stricken eyes.

When at last the door opened Gypsy felt she could not endure much more of this. The two men emerged together, talking in low tones. Dr. Martineau, the specialist, bowed to the women vaguely and went on talking to his colleagues. They were ignored, completely shut out.

"I can't bear it," she whispered faintly.

Her mother rose and faced Dr. Bannerman. "What do you think now, doctor?"

"His pulse is weaker."

MRS. MORELL winced and Gypsy hated both these big men with their calm faces and their calm eyes. Why didn't they do something?

"What are . . ." The older woman's voice faltered on the words but she went on courageously, "What are the chances now?"

Troop 58

Very instructive talks were given by these Scouts: "Trustworthiness," Edward Lester; "Loyalty," Charles Segnar; "Helpfulness," Gus Bernier; "Friendliness," Jim White. The practicing of drills took up the remainder of the time of the program. Each Saturday a patrol from the Troop works on the new scout hut near the Experiment Station.

Clyde Hill, Scribe.

All the troops in this District were gathered together this morning at a delightful place and listened to the Scout Message from President Roosevelt. Tomorrow, these troops have reported, will be observed by each troop attending a church exercise that has been especially prepared for them. These activities are a part of the national program for the American Boy Scout Week, which ends next Wednesday.

Today's Pattern

Picture what a stunning model this would be in handkerchief linen, crepe, voile or cotton prints. The designs may be had in six sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 38 requires 4 5-8 yards of 39 inch material plus 3 1-4 yards of 1 1-2 inch pleating.

To secure a PATTERN and simple sewing chart of this model, tear out this sketch and mail it to JULIA ROY, 108 PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y., together with 15 CENTS in coin. Be sure to enclose, on a separate sheet of paper, YOUR NAME, FULL ADDRESS, YOUR SIZE, THE NUMBER OF THIS PATTERN (NO. 127), and mention the NAME OF THIS NEWSPAPER.

Fame smiled at him and said:
"Well done, indeed, today!
A laurel for your head
And cheers along the way.
A medal for your breast,
A brief time free from sorrow,
This day you've done your best!
But what about tomorrow?"
Has triumph made you vain?
That you'll attempt no more?

Nurses Hatred In Jail Cell

Sullen, remorseless, hating the society on which he has preyed, John Dillinger, captured outlaw, is shown here in a striking character study in Lake county jail at Crown Point, Ind., hoping, he says, for "one more chance" to shoot it out with his captors and escape.

to Mrs. W. Q. Warren for the club and to Mrs. Arthur Swanke for the guests. Following the game, the hostesses assisted by Mrs. R. V. Horn and Mrs. Jack Bush served a delicious salad course. Mrs. Kate Embree of Fort Smith was an out of town guest.

Celebrating her 14th birthday anniversary, Miss Eudora Hatcher entertained a group of her young friends on Friday evening, February 9. The invitations stated that it would be a "tacky party" and the guests came in one of date and mismatched costumes. Prizes for the tactics went to Misses Mary Evelyn Whitworth and Joy Ramsey. The birthday cake was cut and served together with hot hamburgers and Coca Cola to Misses Marjorie Diddy, Ruth Dickinson, Mary Evelyn Whitworth, Martha Houston, Alma Crain, Frances Jean Williams, Carolyn Augusta Barr, Sara Ann Holland, Audrey McAdams, Ruth Marie Keen, Joy Ramsey, Dorothy Honeycutt and Pauline Hatcher.

Mr. and Mrs. Coulter Lipscomb will return to their home in Oklahoma City Sunday afternoon after a short visit to Mr. Lipscomb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Lipscomb in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Garrison and children of White Cliffs, Ark., are spending the week end with Mrs. Garrison's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Lipscomb.

Income Tax In a Nutshell

WHO? Single persons who had net income of $1,000 or more or gross income of $5,000 or more, and married couples who had net income of $2,500 or more or gross income of $5,000 or more must file returns.

WHEN? The filing period begins January 1 and ends March 15, 1934.

WHERE? Collector of internal revenue for the district in which the person lives or has his principal place of business.

HOW? See instructions on forms 1040A and 1040.

WHAT? Four per cent normal tax on the first $4,000 in excess of the personal exemption and credits. Eight per cent normal tax on the balance of net income. Surplus on net income in excess of $6,000.

Income-Tax Don'ts
Don't prepare your return without first studying the instructions on the form.

DON'T procrastinate. Early assembling of data permits a careful consideration of all tax problems.

Don't destroy the memoranda from which your return was prepared.

DON'T omit explanation when such information is essential to an intelligent audit. Attach memoranda to your return.

No. 12
Deduction for Business Expenses
Deductions for business expenses form a large item in the return of many taxpayers and must have certain qualifications to be allowed. Such deduction must be for an expenditure in connection with the maintenance and operation of the taxpayer's business or business properties; it must be an ordinary expense and it must be a necessary expense. In insisting upon the latter qualifications, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is upheld by the Board of Tax Appeals and the courts. Ordinary and necessary expenses are only those which are usually and essential in the case of similar taxpayers, "and do not include extraordinary and nonessential expenses."

Typical business expenses of a mercantile establishment are amounts paid for advertising, hire of clerks and other employees, rent, light, heat, water, stationery, stamps, telephone, property insurance, and delivery expenses.

The expenses of a manufacturing business include labor, supplies, repairs, light and heat, power, selling cost, administration, and other similar charges.

The farmer may deduct all amounts paid in the production, harvesting, and marketing of crops, including labor, cost of seed and fertilizer used, cost of minor repairs to farm buildings (other than his dwelling), and small tools used up in the course of a year or two. A taxpayer may conduct more than one business and claim the business deductions of each.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
The two local troops of Boy Scouts will be guests at the First Baptist church Sunday night at the 7:30 service. The pastor will use as his subject "Jesus—A Boy" and will speak with special attention to the young people present at the service.

There will be a number of visiting singers present who will have a part in the service, among them Mr. F. X. Trigg, voice teacher with the Stafford School of Music which is holding a one month session in Hope now. Mr. Trigg will sing a solo, and a quartet of men from the school will sing one number.

The male chorus of the First Baptist church will sing. This chorus, under the leadership of Mrs. J. C. Carlton, is growing in popularity until people from both the city and rural sections come when it is announced. It will be larger than heretofore, and will sing some of the great old hymns of the church.

Tiger Thriller at Saenger Two Days

Special Matinee at 2:45
Monday for School Children

There are more tigers in the Asiatic jungles today than ever before, in the opinion of Clyde E. Elliott, who is back in Hollywood after a year in India. Siam and Indo-China and the film "Devil Tiger," comes to the Saenger Sunday and Monday with a special bargain matinee for all school children at 2:45 Monday.

With the lowering of the price of raw rubber, many rubber plantations have been turned back to the jungle," he said, "and tigers propagate with the ease and celerity of house cats. They kill from 20,000 to 25,000 natives yearly."

Elliott, who previously directed "Bring 'Em Back Alive," feels that the year spent in the jungles to make "Devil Tiger" has been well worth while. He has just completed the task of selecting the best (thrill) shots from the 700,000 feet of film he exposed.

It is the first time a dramatic picture, with a Hollywood cast, has been made entirely in the virgin jungles.

Among the battles recorded there between a tiger and a crocodile, a python and a leopard, a Malayan bear and a hyena, a tiger and a leopard, a tiger and a lion, a man and a python, a black panther and a crocodile, and a number of others, Elliott spent three weeks recording an elephant stampede in northern Siam as part of the story.

to follow, they are all eminent—in the circles which they choose to frequent. A renewal of courtly etiquette might diminish greatly the splendor in which some of these titled folks now move among the great, despotic population of France. There are many titles which no Bourbon would recognize—Napoleonic titles, for instance, sprinkled with lavish Corsican generosity among the First Emperor's own relatives; distributed further by the little emperor, Louis-Napoleon sixty-odd years ago.

How deep popular enthusiasm for the restoration goes in a question. For years the whole burden of royalist propaganda in France has been carried on the sturdy and very competent shoulders of two decided commoners—Leon Daudet and Charles Maurras, whose royalist daily, "l'Action Française" is perhaps the most brilliantly written, certainly the most diverting of any Paris newspaper.

The claim of the Duc de Guise to the crown of France is based on the fact that he is a lineal descendant of Louis IX (Saint Louis) and of Henri IV, not to mention Louis XIII and the granddaddy of all the French kings, Hugh Capet.

Less mention is made of the fact that he is also a lineal descendant of that other Bourbon, Philippe, Duc d'Orleans, who took the name of Philippe Egalite during the Revolution, voted for the death of his relative, Louis XVI on the guillotine, and has since been known to history as the Regicide.

Equality was never a strong point with the House of France and, no doubt, the little slip of the elder Philippe has long since been passed over as an unfortunate family complication best forgotten. Certainly in recent years no aspirant Bourbon has taken any chances of mingling any unequal blood with his and thus diminishing the pure strain of the royal line. But the direct line from the great Louis XIV has got more or less tangled, and recent pretenders have been no more than great-grand-nephews of the Sun-King. His predecessor in the job was the Duc d'Orleans, whose title if he had reigned would have been Philippe VIII.

The career of the Duc d'Orleans, who was born in England, was a succession of mishaps from the time when he was accused of displaying untoward agitation because a spent buckshot hit him in the nose at a British schooling party.

After a pseudo-heroic effort to enlist as a common soldier in the French army which landed him in jail (where he entertained lavishly) he was mixed up in a divorce suit, fell in love with an opera singer which cost him the hand of one bride-to-be, married another titled lady, and promptly went off on a big-game hunt. Many years later he tried to annul the marriage on the score that the Archduchess Dorothea of Austria had never born him a son. Failing, he cut her off in his will, and died in 1826.

With this example of how not to act, the present pretender, the Duc de Guise, is a very different type. His mother and father both were Bourbons, cousins descending from King Louis-Philippe. Since he was not in direct line to the throne, he was shortage of pilots because the Air Corps had between 1,200 and 1,300 officers, all of whom would be available, if required, for airmail flights. The Air Corps' 14,000 enlisted men will be used to service the planes.

He added that most of the pilots for airmail companies held commissions in the Air Corps Reserve and if necessary could be called for active service.

Asked what salaries the pilots would draw if called for army service, MacArthur said the army fliers would base pay plus 50 per cent and that such salaries were approximately the salaries drawn by airmail pilots.

A resolution asking the Emergency Relief Commission to make purchases of seed in the counties where seeds are to be distributed, rather than in Little Rock, was introduced by W. S. Atkins. The resolution was addressed to Edgar A. Hodson, director of gardens and food conservation. It asked that he use his influence to change the buying plans for purchasing seeds which are to be distributed this spring. The club passed the resolution unanimously.

Copies were sent to J. Marion Furell, governor and chairman of the State Emergency Relief; to Hon. W. R. Dyess, CWA director, and also to the Hope Rotary club, which organization had initiated the movement.

Whitfield Davis, manager of the Hempstead County Lumber Co., was initiated into the Kiwanis club by Joe R. Floyd, past president. Vernon Whitten led in community singing, accompanied by the club pianist, Miss Harriet Story. Charles Dana Gibson presided.

A board of directors meeting is scheduled at the home of C. F. Erwin next Tuesday night at 7:30.
